May 30, 2013 (Davison, MI) - C&L Ward has announced the retirement of their In-Home Sales Manager, Jerry Roberts. Roberts, who had been with the company for five years and in the home improvement industry for over fifty years, decided it was time to move on to the next phase of life.

"Over the past five years, Jerry has been instrumental in developing and building our in-home sales team. His leaving marks the end of a period, in which, C&L Ward has flourished into a top-tier home improvement company in Michigan," stated Patrick Ward, President of C & L Ward. "We are indebted to his leadership, knowledge of our industry and commitment to propel our company forward into a market leadership position. His work as both a manager and mentor has assured our success for many years to come. Without question, he has made a positive impact on the people at our company in many different ways."

Roberts will be honored for his contributions in a farewell luncheon to be held at C&L Ward's Davison office on Friday, May 31. When asked what he was most excited about, he replied, "I'm anxious to know how it feels to plan an appointment for any time of day, any day of the week."
